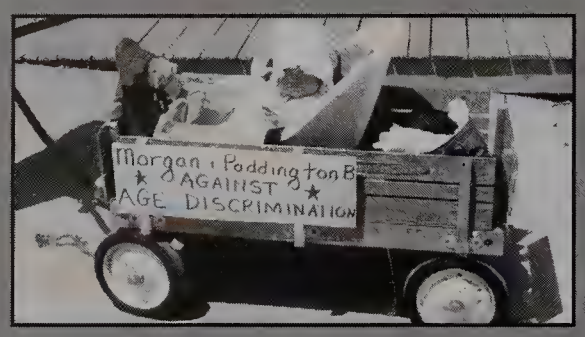
Letters from Home

Morgan Bickerstaff



Morgan's very first protest -- she developed her protesting skills at a very young age!

Linda Janson

Linda,
Congratulations to you. Your accomplishments are no surprise to us. We have always believed in you. We have watched you grow and know that, in addition to your scholastic accomplishments, you were willing to try other activities--whether it be dance, music, or sports--and always did the best that you could do. We applaud your desire to set goals for yourself and your ability to reach them through hard work and perseverance. We know you will continue to strive to accomplish all you set out to do. We wish you success in whatever new paths you follow. Know that we will always love you and support you in whatever choices you make.
With all our love,
Mom & Dad

Amanda Abreu

Dear Amanda:

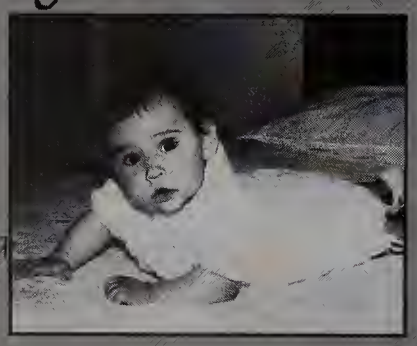
Recent years have been a series of challenges for you. So many changes happened that were out of your control, changes that could have dragged you down, but they have made you stronger. You have shown an inner strength that will continue to see you through the twists and turns that are inevitable in your future. We are proud of you and your accomplishments and we know that you have so much to offer to those who have yet to know how wonderful you are. We love you very much...Mom, Dad, Marco, and Sara

Alice Fangueiro

Dear Ali,

You did it! All of your hard work and determination has paid off. You are an amazing woman!! May the future bring you all that you wish for and may all of your dreams come true.

We all love you very much and are extremely proud of you!



Love
Dad, Mom, Bi, & Duque

Kara Jackimovicz

Congratulations Kara,

We knew your could do it-- now you're off on a big adventure: the future. Best wishes from all your family! We'll always be here for you, especially to help if life's rough edges should ever touch you.

Sarah,

Sarah Thesse

Words cannot express how proud we are of you. You have enriched our lives beyond what we could have imagined.

With our love, we wish for you much happiness and success.

Love, Mom & Dad

She is scared because she was messing around with the cake, and that is her way. She has always been daring, and that is how she has achieved her goals.

Congratulations!

You have a great future
ahead of you!

All our Love
Mummy, Daddy, Courtney, Sophie, Studs, & Cheech

Jennifer Lee,
I cannot believe how fast the last four years have gone by. I am so very very proud of you. You have done a wonderful job as always! Thank you for being such a sweet wonderful daughter. You truly are the sweetest, kindest person I know. May you always find joy in whatever career path you choose. Do what you love to do and you will not only excel at it, but you will be happy doing it.
Have confidence in yourself--you deserve it!
I love you,
Love,
Mom

Great Job Jen!
We Love You,
Jimmy, Amanda, & Rachel

Congratulations Jen!
I know you will succeed
in whatever you do.
Love,

Four

Over the past four years the world and our perceptions of it have changed in ways we could have never predicted.

Long

Some of these changes made us laugh and others made us cry, but they all made us stronger, better women.

Years

It all began the first day of Orientation. In little ways…

saying goodbye to your parents,

your first T ride,
your first night out on the town.

There was MCC,

your first visit to the registrar,

that first bad grade,

and your chance to earn an “A.”

Accomplishment!

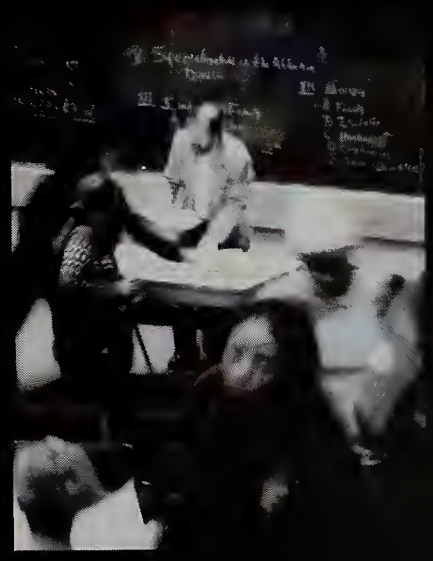
Neighbors became friends...

Friends became family...

Simmons quickly became home.

We shared laughs, cried on each others' shoulders, and stayed up all hours of the night...

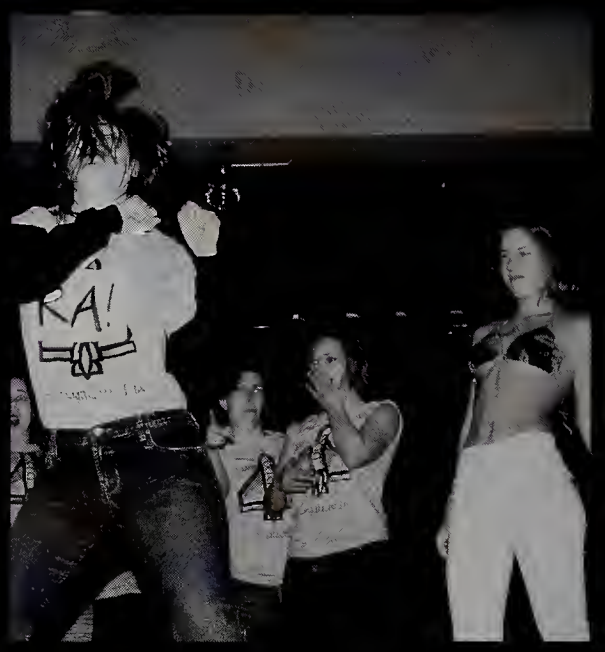
Worked on papers until dawn...



Swore we'd never do it again...

But we did!

Rallies you attended, Simmons Cup, guest lecturers, watching American Idol in the lounge, dodging Boston traffic.

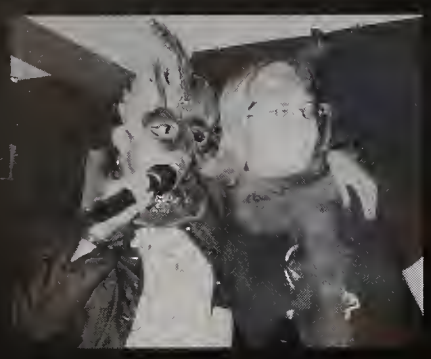


Then you look up and you're a senior.
It is all ending, weeks fly, while days crawl.

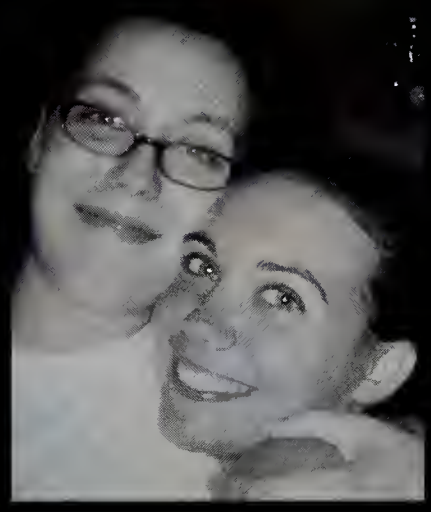
You are scared, You are excited.
You are ready for whatever is next.

Residence Life

Simmons Women Work Hard...
And Play Harder



Kristen



When we look back on the years we spent at Simmons, what will we remember most? Will it be all the time we spent in class with our favorite professors? The times we stayed up late and bonded with our roommates or floormates?

When classes are over and we need a break from papers, projects, and homework, we leave our books behind and go in search of those people who make our Simmons experience special. We run to our friends' rooms down the hall and down the street. We go out and make our mark on this city. We stay in and make memories that will last a lifetime.

"Some people come into our lives and quickly go, some stay for a while and leave footprints on our hearts and we are never, ever the same."

Mass. Supreme Court Upholds Marriage Rights

By Valerie Basnight
Staff Writer

On November 18, 2003, the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court declared that granting civil marriages to heterosexual couples violates the Commonwealth's Constitution.

Chief Justice Margaret Marshall supported the decision saying, "the right to marry means little if it does not include the right to marry the person of one's choice." The Supreme Judicial Court (SJC) gave the legislature 180 days to bring Massachusetts laws into accordance with the ruling.

On February 4, 2004, the SJC reiterated that same-sex couples have the right to marry and that civil unions do not satisfy rights enjoined in the constitution.

The SJC justices said that "without the right to choose to marry, same-sex couples are not only denied full protection of the laws, but are excluded from the full range of human experience...the [civil union] bill maintains an unconstitutional, inferior and discriminatory status for same-sex couples.

Lately there has been a lot of debate over the issue, and a push by conservative to add an amendment both to the United States Constitution and the Commonwealth's Constitution banning same-sex marriage.

To clarify, civil marriage is a legal status recognized by every state and all governments over the world. Not only does this status receive legal rights and protections, it is also a cultural institution. Civil marriages are entitled to more than one thousand legal protections of the Federal Government ranging from the right to take leave from work to care for a family member, to Social Security survivor benefits.

Civil union is a legal status created by the state of Vermont in 2000 that provides legal protection at the state law, but omits federal protections. Unlike marriages, civil unions are not respected and acknowledged in any state except for Vermont, and can only be ended in Vermont whereas marriages can be ended in any state of residency. Civil unions are also excluded from all of the critical legal protections that marriage entitles heterosexual couples that determine rights during life and after death.

In a response issued at the request of the Mass. Senate, the SJC said, "civil unions are not part of the deal - any ban on gay marriage at all is unconstitutional."

The SJC insists that only full marriage rights for same-sex couples will meet the ruling of its November decision.

On February 11, the Legislature began consideration of an amendment that could undo the recent SJC ruling and legally define marriage as a union between one man and one woman. This proposed amendment would also make it impossible to grant civil unions or even domestic partnerships to same-sex couples.

The proposed article of amendment says that, "it being the public policy of this Commonwealth to protect the unique relationship of marriage in order to promote, among other goals, the stability and welfare of society and the best interest of children, only the union of one man and one woman shall be valid or recognized as a marriage in Massachusetts. Any other relationship shall not be recognized as a marriage or its legal equivalent."

When questions of religious legitimacy arose, the Massachusetts Congressional Delegation voiced its opinions in bulk. In a three-paragraph letter signed by all ten members, the all-democratic Congressional Delegation argued that, "we are firmly committed to protecting the rights of religions to recognize only such

Men share Simmons' History

By Kate Diamond
Features Editor

As registration season dawns on Simmons College yet again, students are reminded of a distant option among the Colleges of the Fenway (COF): cross registration. Students from Simmons, Emmanuel College, Wheelock College, the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences (MCPHS), the Massachusetts College of Art (MCA), and the Wentworth Institute of Technology (WIT) are allowed to take up to four credits per term at any school in the consortium.

Cross registration among the six colleges began in 1996 when the COF was founded. It was "the first thing we did," said Claire Ramsbottom, program director of the consortium. Cross registration "opened up resources to students from other schools," she said.

At the time the new policy caused a disturbance among faculty, staff, and students at Simmons, but it was not the first time men had entered the college's classrooms.

"From a Simmons perspective, [cross registration's] not something that's never happened," said Ramsbottom.

According to Registrar Donna Dolan, there have been men at Simmons since the college was founded. In fact, during World War II Simmons saw its height of male enrollment.

Since the 1970's students have been able to cross register among Simmons, Emmanuel, the MCA, and the New England Music Conservatory.

Despite previous cross registration programs, the one initiated in 1996 received was the most contentious. In 1996, presidents of all the colleges were worried that their schools might lose their individual identities. Those worries were exacerbated when the media started referring to the consortium as a "merger," according to Ramsbottom.

However, under the guidelines of cross registration within the consortium, professors are allowed to close their classes to students who cross register.

Professor of Communications Bob White is one such professor. When cross registration was still being debated, "I had a sign that said 'isn't being a little bit co-ed like being a little bit pregnant?'" said White.

White also referenced a speech made by David Gullette, professor of English, to a group of accepted students. "In high school perhaps adolescent boys were a distraction . . . perhaps they made fun of you when you were too smart . . . you may not come to Simmons because it's a women's college, but you'll find something in the classroom that's unique," summarized White.

"I don't put [men cross registering at a women's college] together as one thing contradicting the other. A true women's education doesn't equal educational environments minus men," said Sheila Murphy, dean of Student Life. Murphy did not believe men cross registering at Simmons invalidated the college's mission as a women's college. Because there are male faculty and staff members at the college, she said, the presence of male students does not detrimentally affect Simmons's mission.

Murphy maintained that it is important that men are not allowed in every class and that it is the professors who ultimately decide whether or not their courses are available to cross-registering students. "I don't think a faculty member should be asked 'why' a certain course is closed," said Murphy. Upper level classes are often kept off limits to cross registration. Some faculty members do not build their curriculum for male audiences, said Dolan. Women's studies, for example, remains an area of study where few classes are open for men.

In any given term, there are about five to ten courses not available to outside students. For those courses, however, Dolan said that the issue of gender is not the main blockade to cross registration.

Of course, there is a positive side to cross registration and the male students that inherently come with the process. "It's a great experience for men to be in an all-women environment," said Ramsbottom. "They're the minority when they walk into Simmons. In a way, it accomplishes what a women's college strives for."

On average, there are about 250 students who cross register among COF schools. Last spring, there were 69 women and 32 men who cross-registered to Simmons. The majority of students cross register at Simmons to study foreign language and social studies. An inter-institutional fine art major is also in the early stages of planning.

"I think the [consortium] has worked well for us," said Dolan.

Simmons Soccer Team Wins GNAC Season Title

BOSTON (October 30, 2003) - The Simmons College soccer team recently won the Great Northeast Atlantic Conference (GNAC) regular season title, compiling a 7-1-1 record. The title is the first since 1996 for the Simmons Sharks. The team is the conference's top seed in the playoffs, which start Nov. 1 at 11 a.m. at Simmons against Rivier College. During the regular season, the Sharks outscored their opponents 34-6. They recorded significant victories over five-time defending conference champion Western New England College and Norwich College, and tied Johnson & Wales University. Leading season scorers included junior Meghan McGoldrick and freshman Nicole Zielinski, who have combined to score 18 of the team's goals and have scored in every game of the season. Zielinski was twice named GNAC Rookie of the Week. Throughout the season, contributions were made by the entire team, including seniors Mary Donington, Lesley McShea, Leslie Mitchell, Alia Sullivan, Liz Rothwell, junior Elizabeth Kidde, and sophomores Katie England and Jocelyn Newell. Fourteen Shark players have scored goals for Simmons this year. Five student-athletes have played in the goal, including Leslie Mitchell, usually a field player, who recorded a win and a loss and received GNAC Honor Roll recognition. Simmons College is a Division III member of the NCAA, MAIAW and Great Northeast Athletic Conference.

From a Simmons SongBook

Here's a song to the Senior Moon,
As up in the sky it swings,
Promising Seniors good days to come
Here's to the hope it brings!

Bright is the night with it's radiant light,
Filled with its shimmering glare.
Here's to the moon,
To the Senior Moon,
So bright, so red, so fair!

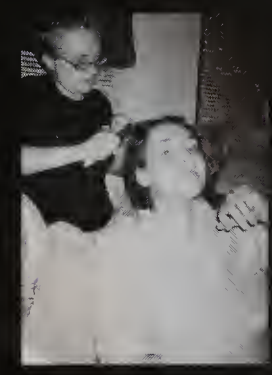
Remember When...?



You don't take a photograph,
you make it!

Congratulations 2004

Members of the Class of 2004,

I stare at this blank page, the last one of the 2004 Microcosm. Feelings of relief, joy, and even a little sadness creep in from the corners of the small office in the basement of student activities. From the late night cropping sessions to running around Evans Hall snapping candids for the rapidly approaching deadline.

There are a number of people I would personally like to thank, without whose support this year would have never been possible. Tom Keeley and Brenda Savino of Jostenís Publishing, Caren Orlick from Davor Photography, Student Life Office, Rob Lavender and the Planning office, Archives, UNICO and Facilities, And last but not least Snehal Naik and the Office of Student Activities.

Contrary to popular belief the yearbook is not a one woman job. There are three ladies that I would have been absolutely lost without. Alyson Heimer í07, Laura Sutherland í05, and Kari Fitch í06 I would like to thank you from the bottom of my heart for all your support, smiles, hugs, late nights & early mornings, dedication and friendship. This year would not have been possible (nor nearly as much fun) without you!

In addition to an amazing staff, I was also lucky enough to work with a wonderful advisor. Melissa Bersofsky came into the yearbook office the first day I was there and asked me what I hoped to get out of this year. I would have never imagined that I would be leaving with more knowledge and refined leadership skills about the yearbook as well as student-run organizations as a whole. Although, we may not have always seen eye to eye Melissa helped me and the rest of the staff stretch to really make this an amazing year!

And last but certainly not least I would like to thank you, the class of 2004. This year has been one filled with laughter, tears, and a whole lot of fun. I would like to take this opportunity to thank each and every one of you for allowing the yearbook staff to enter the lives of your class. It has been a great year and it never would have been possible without your help and support. I hope you find this book as a look into your past four years at Simmons and in Boston. Good luck with all your future endeavors, Iím sure you will succeed in whatever you do!

Many Thanks,

~Melanie R. Lessard ë05
